Layla

By Islam Akef Ebeid

As Layla walked along the river.

A frog appeared to be lying in a shiver.

Layla held the frog in concern.

The frog jumped into a fern.

Layla chased the frog down the farm.

Came as close as an arm.

To catch the frog down a hill.

She tripped, trampled, and suddenly felt a chill.

She bumped into a crowd who was looking at an altar.

A bride appeared in a wedding dress with no falter.

Looking at the groom, she finally found her anchorage.

Layla long laid on the grass as she watched the marriage.

The crowned cheered at the kiss of the bride & groom.

Hoping for a future filled with bloom.